

Edgardo Civallero

The archive of the community's voices
Libraries and oral tradition in the digital era

IFLA Satellite Meeting

Academic and Research Libraries

Berlin, Germany, 15-17.VIII.2017

A close-up photograph of a person's hands working with wood. A hand holds a chisel, and another hand holds a piece of wood. In the foreground, a single, tightly coiled green wood shaving lies on a dark, textured wooden surface. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the texture of the wood and the metallic edge of the chisel.

[1]

Introduction

A photograph showing two dark, weathered wooden bowls and a long, thin metal spoon resting on a bed of green grass and small white flowers. The bowls are positioned side-by-side, with one slightly overlapping the other. The spoon lies diagonally across the top right.

[2]

The importance of oral tradition

knowledge

tradition

orality

memory

[3]

Academic collection and archive

community

archive

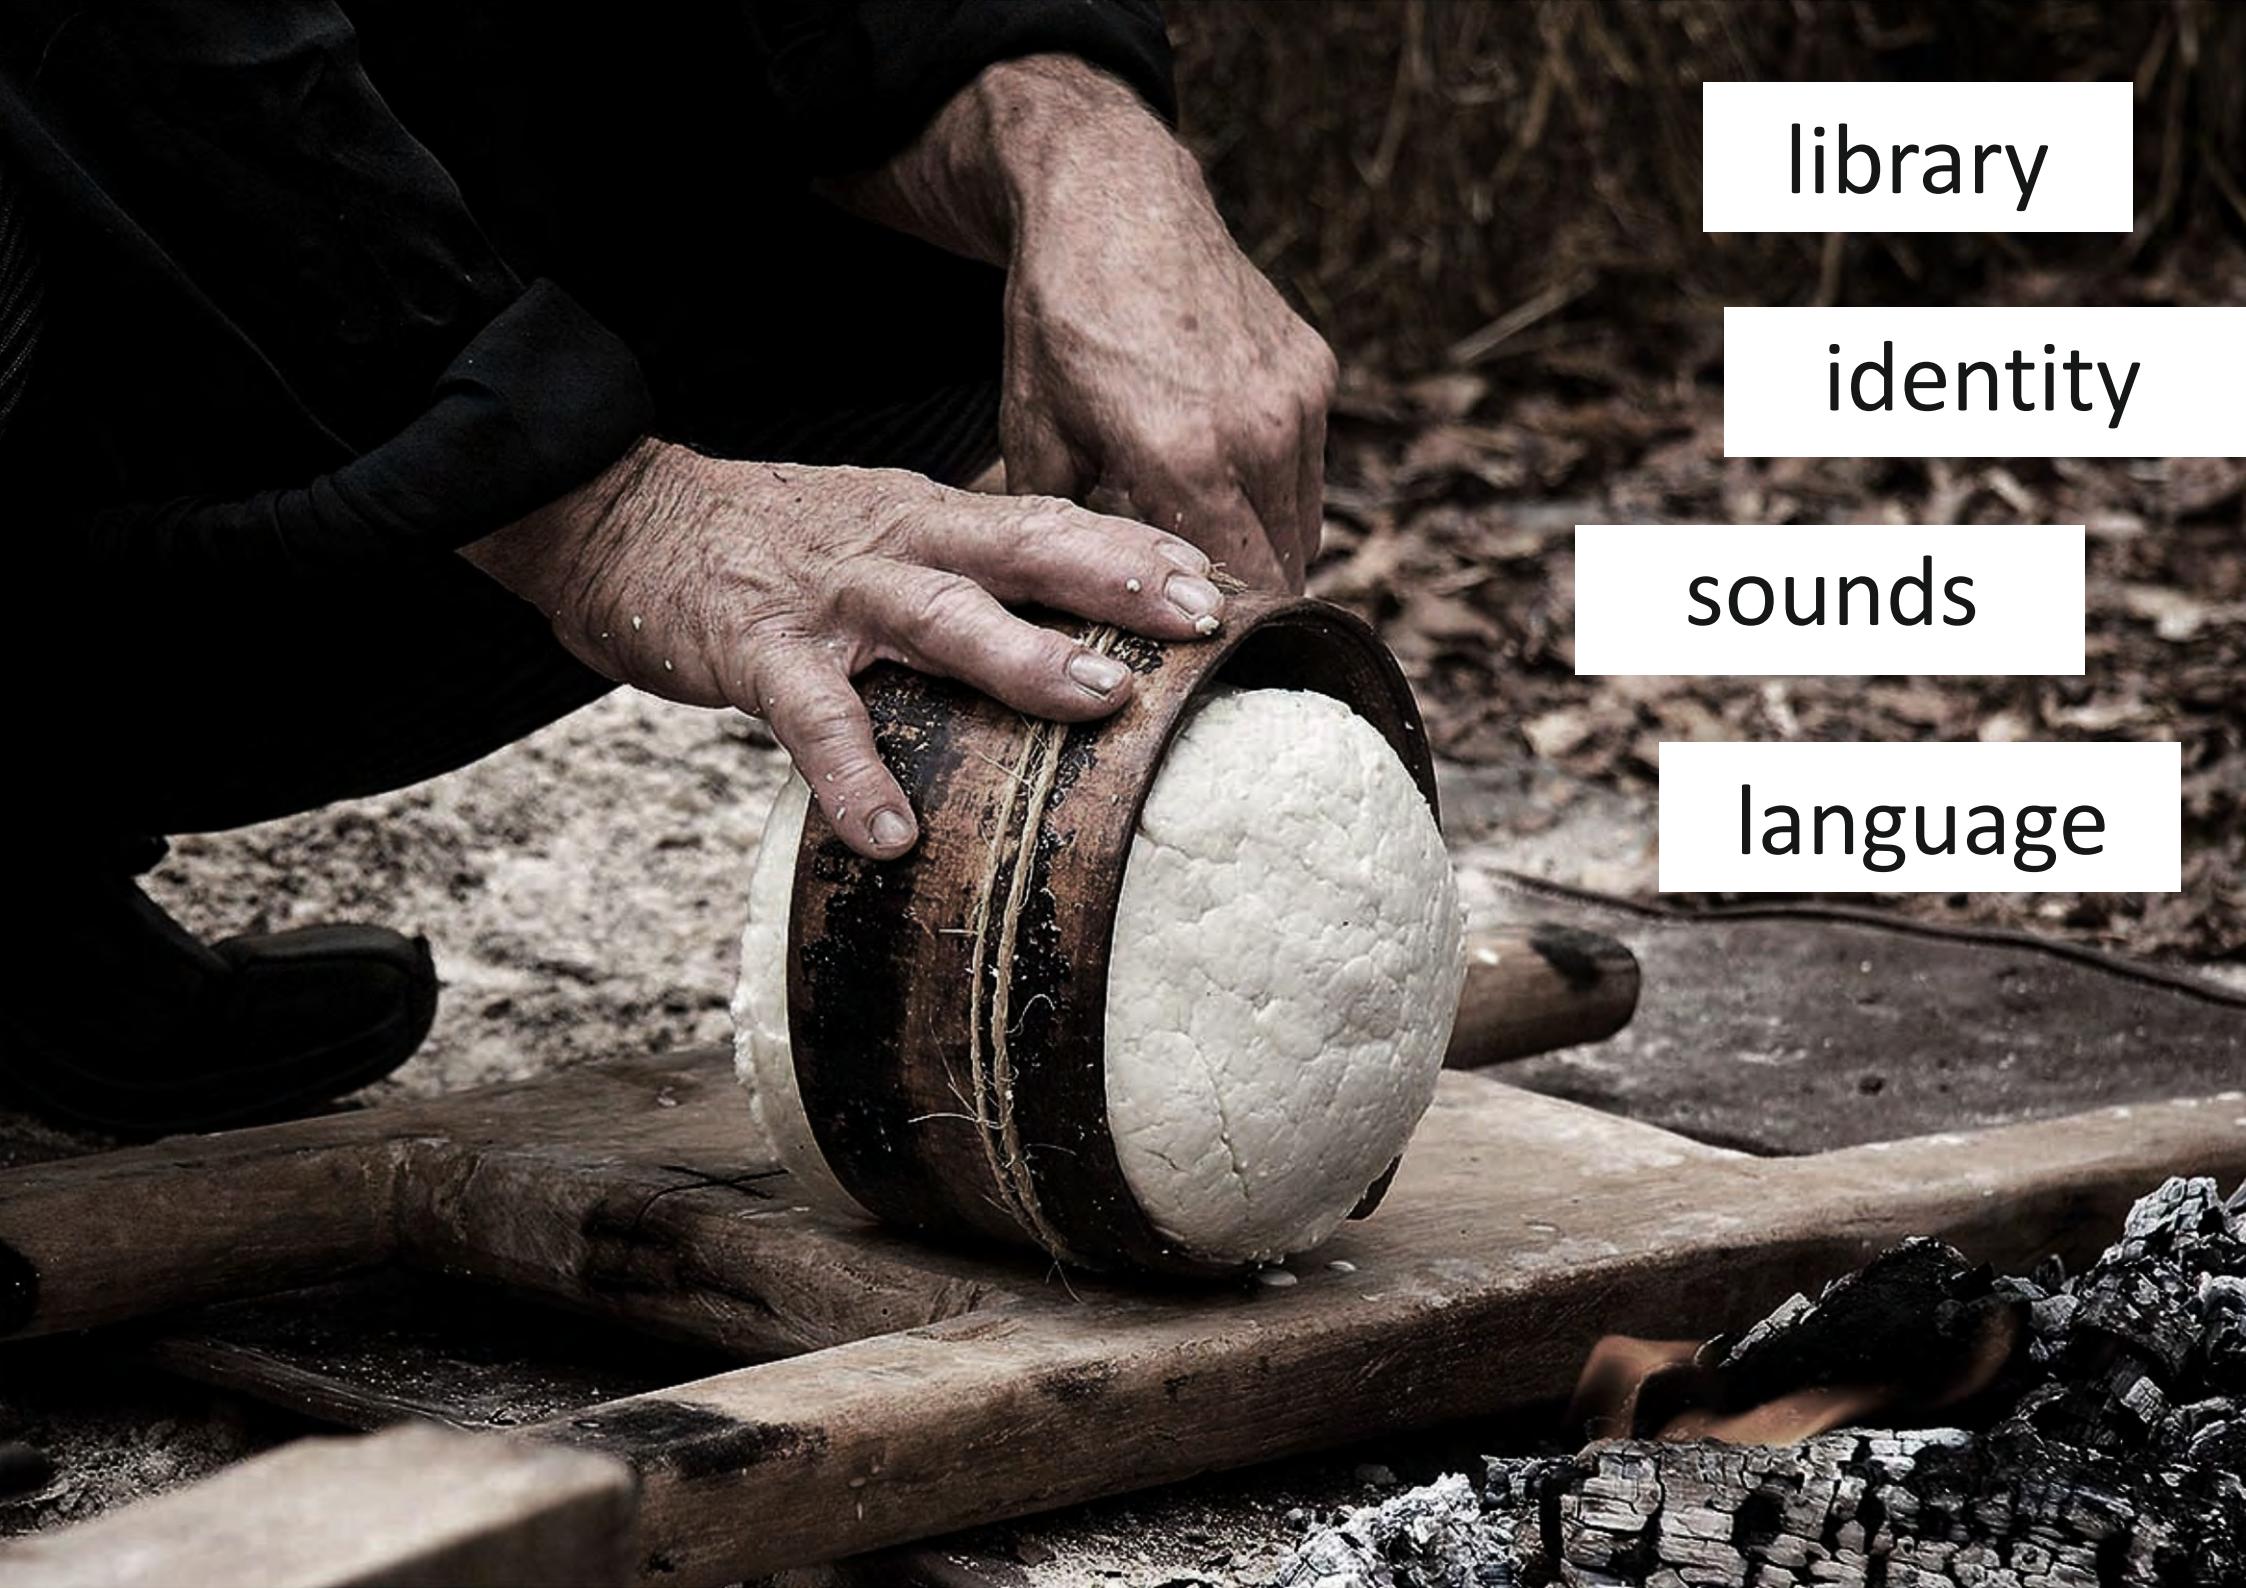

research

Academia

[4]

Libraries and oral tradition

library

identity

sounds

language

[5]

New technologies
& new alliances

A close-up photograph of a person's hands using electric sheep shears to shave the wool from a sheep's side. The sheep has white and brownish-grey fur. The background is a straw-covered ground.

ICTs

space

know-how

connection

Edgardo Civallero

IFLA Satellite Meeting
Academic and Research Libraries
Berlin, Germany, 15-17.VIII.2017