Edited by Louise Mallinder, Professor of Law, School of Law, Institute for Global Peace, Security and Justice, Queen's University Belfast, UK, Rachel Killean, Senior Lecturer, University of Sydney Law School, Australia and Lauren Dempster, Senior Lecturer, School of Law, Institute for Global Peace, Security and Justice, Queen's University Belfast, UK

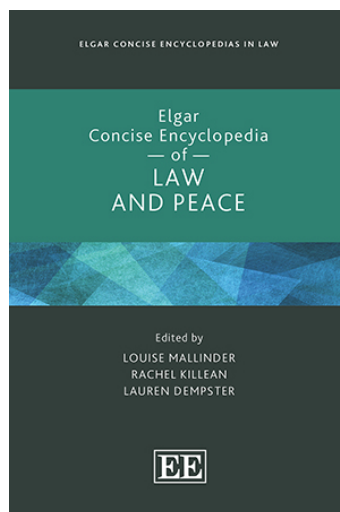

This pioneering Concise Encyclopedia analyses theoretical insights and global practice relating to the intersection between law and peace. It brings together over 140 international scholars and expert practitioners to explore the concepts, theories, actors, bodies of law and institutions within this essential area of scholarship.

'In a time of undulating war and global hopes for peace this Encyclopedia is timely and much needed. Bringing together some of the world's foremost scholarly and policy experts, it is accessible, comprehensive and insightful. It gives tremendous insights both at the macro and micro level, is intersectional and interdisciplinary in its delivery and delivers an exceptional book which will be an invaluable resource for practitioner and scholars alike.'

– Fionnuala Ní Aoláin, University of Minnesota Law School, USA and Queen's University Law School, Belfast, UK

'Clear-sighted readings of the relationship between law and peace could hardly be more urgently required than they are at present. This invaluable volume provides exactly what is so badly needed. It brings together scholars and practitioners with rich experience and deep knowledge, and illuminates a vast range of inter-related subjects in accessible and compelling ways. A vital book.'

– Richard English, Queen's University, UK
